Pigletté and BoBo begin their adventure with Mark and Onyx in Berkeley, California.

They are soon joined by Mark Pucci from Boston. Remember him from "Pigletté and BoBo Head East"?

And last to arrive is Lia, Mark's friend from San Francisco. She works in the financial industry, but she is still very nice.

Pucci makes us take another picture because the first picture wasn't very flattering. He is very nice to his woman friends.

Look at the lovely meal UncleMarkie makes for the whole gang! Mmm—Ahi Tuna with a Mango Salsa glaze.

Pigletté and BoBo get so hungry waiting for dinner that they start to eat each other. That is so Donner Party.

Librarian Pat comes over after dinner. She seems to like the latest Pigletté and BoBo adventures.

Oh, no! Librarian Pat must not have had enough dinner—
there goes BoBo's hand.
Put down that hand, Pat!

The boys decide that it is time for bed. Wait! What is that animal in the background?
Could it be a crazed koala bear?

But it's the basset hound who's the first to come sniffing around. Do you think he sees the koala bear in the background?

Looks like Pigletté and BoBo are going to have lots of company in their bed tonight.
Let's hope the frame holds up!

Before long, the koala bear and the basset hound bring their friend, Mr. Skunk, to meet Pigletté and BoBo.

Mr. Skunk is very friendly—but he is a bit stinky. Pigletté and BoBo do not hold it against him that he is odor-challenged.

Wow——there are a lot of party animals here in Berkeley.
UncleMarkie always suspected Berkeley was home to radicals.

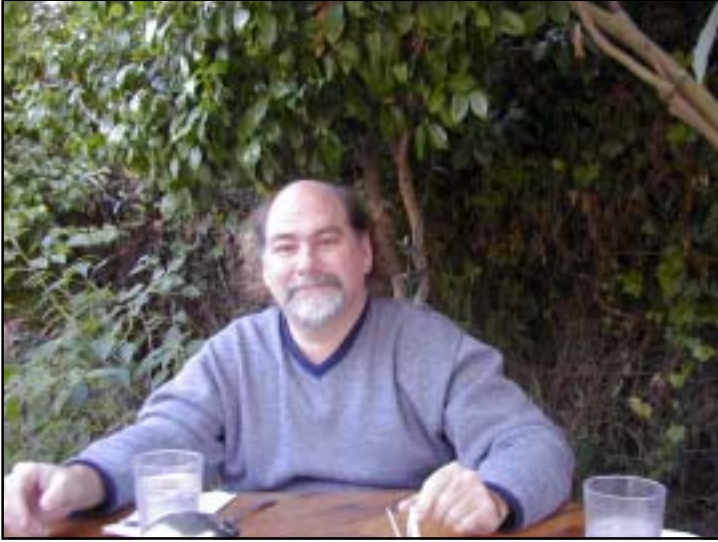

The next day, UncleMarkie has a surprise in store for the boys as they sit in the sun (which they never see at home in Seattle).

Paul, Onyx, Mark, and UncleMarkie take Pigletté and BoBo to the Ridge Winery. It is one of UncleMarkie's favorites.

While waiting for lunch at the creperery, Onyx struggles to put his hair in a bun. I think he wants to look like Librarian Pat!

UncleMarkie doesn't have enough hair to put in a bun. But UncleMarkie's mother has a Master's Degree in Library Science, so really he's part librarian, too.

No librarian bun for Paul, either.
Pigletté, BoBo, and the gang just want to know when their meal will be served.

After our late lunch we were treated to a spectacular sunset on the way back to Berkeley. It was a several-hour drive.

The following day Pigletté & BoBo have far to travel. They end up at the Waterbrook Winery in Walla Walla, Washington.

Pigletté and BoBo's next stop is the tasting room at Cayuse—which has its own pig.
They open twice yearly.

After the lovely snacks at Cayuse, it was on to the Seven Hills Winery. They were much less snotty than Cayuse.

The stolid gentleman at Tamarack Cellars poses with Pigletté and BoBo. They make wine in an old fire station.

The wine maker at Russell Creek (seen here bending over) took Pigletté and BoBo to the airport for their trip home.
