What a strange airport.
UncleMarkie loves the neon in the transit tunnel at O'Hare International Airport.

Pigletté and BoBo, along with UncleMarkie, decide to stay overnight in this small room outside Frankfurt, Germany to lessen their jet-lag.

What a cute, compact bathroom.
The door to the bathroom actually swings the other way to be the door on the shower. How cool is that?

The boys are staying with Obrad, Ruzica, and Irena. If you look close you can see them in the background feeding the swans.

This is Obrad and Ruzica's only child, Irena, with her pet turtle. He looks a little small to make turtle soup out of.

Irena introduces Pigletté and BoBo to her friend, BlueBear. Do you think BlueBear is a pirate like BlueBeard?

Obrad owns a business that installs these beautiful wood floors. He takes Pigletté and BoBo to see some of them.

This is the Central Square in Zagreb where UncleMarkie and the boys stopped for coffee and cakes.

This is Kapitol Hill, part of the old city. Funny, it doesn't look anything like the Capitol Hill that UncleMarkie lives on.

Soon the whole gang is off to the Trakoscan Castle near the border between Croatia and Serbia.
Can you find it on a map?

Ruzica looks very natural hanging out on one of the castle's
many balconies.
Maybe the boys can move in.

Pigletté and BoBo like the cold weather outside, but think it would take a lot of money to keep the castle warm inside.

The next stop of the day is in Kumrovec, birthplace of Marshal Tito, who ruled the former Yugoslavia back when it that included Croatia.

Back in Zagreb, the boys head to one of many ornate churches in the city center. Better keep Pigletté and BoBo out of the font!

My, what a big organ this church has. UncleMarkie thought he had a big organ at his church, but it's not nearly this big.

Because they aren't in the United States, Croatians get to drive funny vehicles like this Renault. Would you drive this van?

Well, maybe not. But Pigletté and BoBo like this Peugeot.
Funny, both of these cars are French—do you like the French?

All too soon UncleMarkie and the boys are back at the airport, ready to head back through Frankfurt, and then home.

Maybe they should go to Moscow instead. There is an Aeroflot jet ready to go. Aeroflot is the national airline of Russia.

But no, the boys fly to Frankfurt and shack up for the night in this modest room with a view of the parking lot.

Early the next morning they are off to the airport. How many airports do you think Pigletté and BoBo have visited?

Before they know it, Pigletté and BoBo are back in Chicago, only one more flight until they're reunited with their own bed.
