The End

Home again, home again.
The bed feels so-o-o good to BoBo and Pigletté.

The night before heading to Tokyo, Pigletté and BoBo hang out with
Mr. Whitaker and Uncle Markie.

Their friend Dan drives an Audi ragtop. Don't Pigletté and BOBO look comfortable?

And they even share it with UncleMarkie—gee, he always said he doesn't get jet-lagged.

Pigletté and BoBo spring for a limousine for the drive back to their house on Capital Hill.

Pigletté and BoBo find the Red Carpet Room open and serving coffee and juice.

Pigletté and BoBo are strapped in for the long flight.
Doesn't BoBo look excited?

On the way back home, Pigletté and BoBo charter a Boeing 777.
Just kidding—they boarded early.

The Red Carpet Room in Tokyo's Narita Airport is what they call a mega-lounge—two floors!

Uncle Markie sits in the middle seat, with BoBo and Piglette on the aisle.

To Uncle Markie's right is a surfer from Oregon. Why does Uncle Markie always end up with surfers?

Next morning it is time for the boys to head for the airport to the long trip home.

This is their whole happy family, gathered with Pigletté and BoBo in the hallway of their Tokyo palazzo.

After landing, Pigletté and BoBo wait for the NEX high-speed express train into Tokyo.

Pigletté and BoBo meet Michael, our host in Tokyo.
UncleMarkie brings gifts of booze.

Later that day Pigletté and BoBo meet UncleMarkie's long-time friends,
Dave, and his daughter Maya.

Pigletté tries to teach BoBo
how to use the phone.
BoBo doesn't get it.

Pigletté and BoBo are introduced to Michael's boyfriend, Kiyoshi. He gives Pigletté a little tickle.

Kiyoshi and Michael watch as Pigletté and BoBo have their first saké of the day with lunch.

At lunch, Michael poses while Pigletté shows off his new phone. It weighs just 2.2 ounces. BoBo is amused.

The next day we meet Charles.
Charles likes Pigletté and BoBo.
Charles likes his champagne.

Pigletté and BoBo stumble across the premiere of Hedwig and the Angry Inch. Imagine the translation!

Then UncleMarkie, Pigletté, and BoBo head into the Tokyo electronics district of Akihabara.

On the way home from Akihabara, Pigletté and BoBo happen upon this amusing saké bar.
